Lack of progress in acquiring additional prison beds prompted repeated triggering of the state's Prison Overcrowding Emergency Powers Act in 1983. Late in the year the law was revised to allow for separate triggerings for men and women prisoners, and it was believed that the nearly constant use of the law would continue until new prisons could be added to the system.

Cash flow problems and an effort to convert the Plymouth Center for Human Development into a medium-bed prison slowed progress on the Scott Regional Facility near the Phoenix Correctional Facility near Plymouth. It was proposed by the state's Department of Management and Budget that the Corrections Department use part of the mental health facility instead of constructing the Scott facility. Protests by citizens in the area and the assessment by the Executive Office of the Governor that the conversion would have an adverse affect on the area's economy ended that effort.

Plans to build a 550-bed co-correctional facility near Lansing also were stalled by a government study of the use of state office buildings in the area. The study said it would be possible to convert one general office building to a prison. By the end of 1983 no decision had been made by the Executive Office on the results of the study, which also involved movement of state office workers into the City of Lansing.

Efforts to locate a prison site in the City of Detroit had not yet been successful by the end of 1983 even though the state and the city had been working on such a site since the late 1970s.

The state did, however, continue work on a minimum-security camp near the City of Caro in Lapeer County, and converted Camp Pontiac near Clarkston to a camp for women. Women were to move into the converted camp early in 1984.

The Emergency Powers Act was triggered on March 22, Oct. 1 and Dec. 30. The continued crowding of the system in 1983 was believed to be a result, in part, of the effects of the initiative referendum, passed in 1978, called Proposal B which eliminated good time allowances from the sentences of many prisoners. Passage of a new law late in 1982 allowing those prisoners affected by Proposal B to earn "disciplinary credits" at the rate of seven days a month was expected to ease the impact of Proposal B.

Prison commitments were high in 1983, reaching about 6,800, compared with 6,200 in 1982.

Increased training for all department employees especially new corrections officers began in 1983 after allocation of additional funds during the fiscal year. New employee training was doubled to 320 hours of classroom work and 320 hours of on-the-job training. It included major sections on race relations, crisis management, human relations and Aikido, a self-defense technique.

Further improvements in the training effort were further mandated by the Correctional Officers Training Act which requires creation of a council to establish standards for corrections officers in prisons and local facilities. Certification of all corrections officers is mandated annually in the law. To be certified, the new officer must have completed 320 hours of new employee training. The law also requires that new officer applicants have a high school degree or have passed a General Education Development (GED) test.

After Dec. 31, 1984, the officer also must have earned a vocational certificate from an accredited post-secondary institution and have two months of supervised paid internship at a correctional facility.

In the summer of 1983 women corrections officers at the State Prison of Southern Michigan (SPSM), the Michigan Reformatory at Ionia and Marquette Branch Prison worked for the first time in housing units at those prisons. A federal court had ruled earlier that women should not be barred from such duties and ordered the department to compensate women who had been restricted from this duty in the past and who had been denied promotions because of their inability to earn this type of experience.

The women officers were given extra training and their movement into the living units at these prisons proceeded without incident.

During the year the department added about 250 corrections officers to its contingent. The officers filled some vacancies and increased the total force in accordance with an agreement with the Michigan Corrections Organization. Officers delayed receiving a pay raise and exchanged some overtime pay for comp time to pay for the officers.

A major concern for the department during 1983 were negotiations between the state and the U.S. Department of Justice over conditions of confinement at Marquette, the Reformatory and SPSM.

The U.S. Department of Justice had investigated the three prisons under provisions of the U.S. Institutionalized Persons Act in the fall of 1981.

The Justice investigations were concluded in April of 1982. In October of that year the Justice Department notified Gov. Milliken: "...we regret to inform you that at Jackson, Ionia and Marquette we have discovered what we believe to be a pattern or practice of egregious or flagrant conditions that are subjecting the prisoners incarcerated in each facility to grievous harm in violation of their Eighth Amendment rights. We believe that certain unidentified practices also violate the inmate's First and Fourteenth Amendment rights." The department immediately disagreed that unconstitutional conditions existed in many of the cited areas.

The Institutionalized Persons Act requires the U.S. Attorney General to consult with the state prior to initiation of any lawsuit. Beginning early in 1983 representatives of the state Department of the Attorney General and attorneys in the Justice Department began negotiating areas of constitutional concerns which had been raised.

A draft consent decree was circulated among state leaders late in 1983 which called for improvements at the three prisons totaling about $30 million over a six-year period.

The decree was to be filed in a U.S. District Court in 1984.

Other events in 1983 included:

Accreditation of the Muskegon Correctional Facility by the National Commission on Accreditation for Corrections. This was the first prison in Michigan to achieve accreditation.

- A Rand study which looked at Michigan sentencing and parole practices and found that blacks in Michigan enter prison with longer sentences than whites but serve roughly the same time because of parole practices.

- A cut of $5.2 million from the department's 1982-83 budget because of fiscal hard times in the state.

- A study of factors predicting violence among women parolees could not identify any such factors because of the small proportion of women who become involved in violent crime.

- A lawsuit filed by prisoners at the Michigan Reformatory asked for a non-smoking section at the prison.

- A sit-down demonstration at Huron Valley Women's Facility staged by about 100 women prisoners who were protesting what they believed was guard brutality in the movement of a woman prisoner to the prison infirmary. No such brutality was found.

- Legislation introduced to amend the state industries act so private industry could locate inside state prisons to pay prisoners prevailing wages. In turn, the prisoners would be expected to pay for their board and room at the prisons, support dependents, pay taxes and compensate victims.

COURT DISPOSITIONS

The A tables, charts and graphs illustrate data supplied to the Department by the circuit courts in Michigan and the Detroit Recorder's Court. They show dispositions for all felony convictions handled by the courts in 1983.

Table A-1 counts the number of people who received court sentences during the year. Previously this table counted cases, rather than people and the change accounts for the apparent reduction in the number of felony convictions from years previous to 1982. This is no break down for dispositions from Recorder's Court and Wayne County Circuit Court because the court's computerized system does not provide this as in the past.

The A-1 table categorizes each person according to the most severe sentence s/he received even though a person may have been sentenced for several felony crimes. An individual will be counted more than once if s/he received court sentences on separate occasions three months or more apart.

The group designations are illustrated through pie charts A1a through A1e rather than through graphs. The definitions of the groups accompany the charts. More details on these groups can be obtained through the Public Information Office.

A2 counts all court dispositions (cases) as in previous years. One person may have received several sentences.

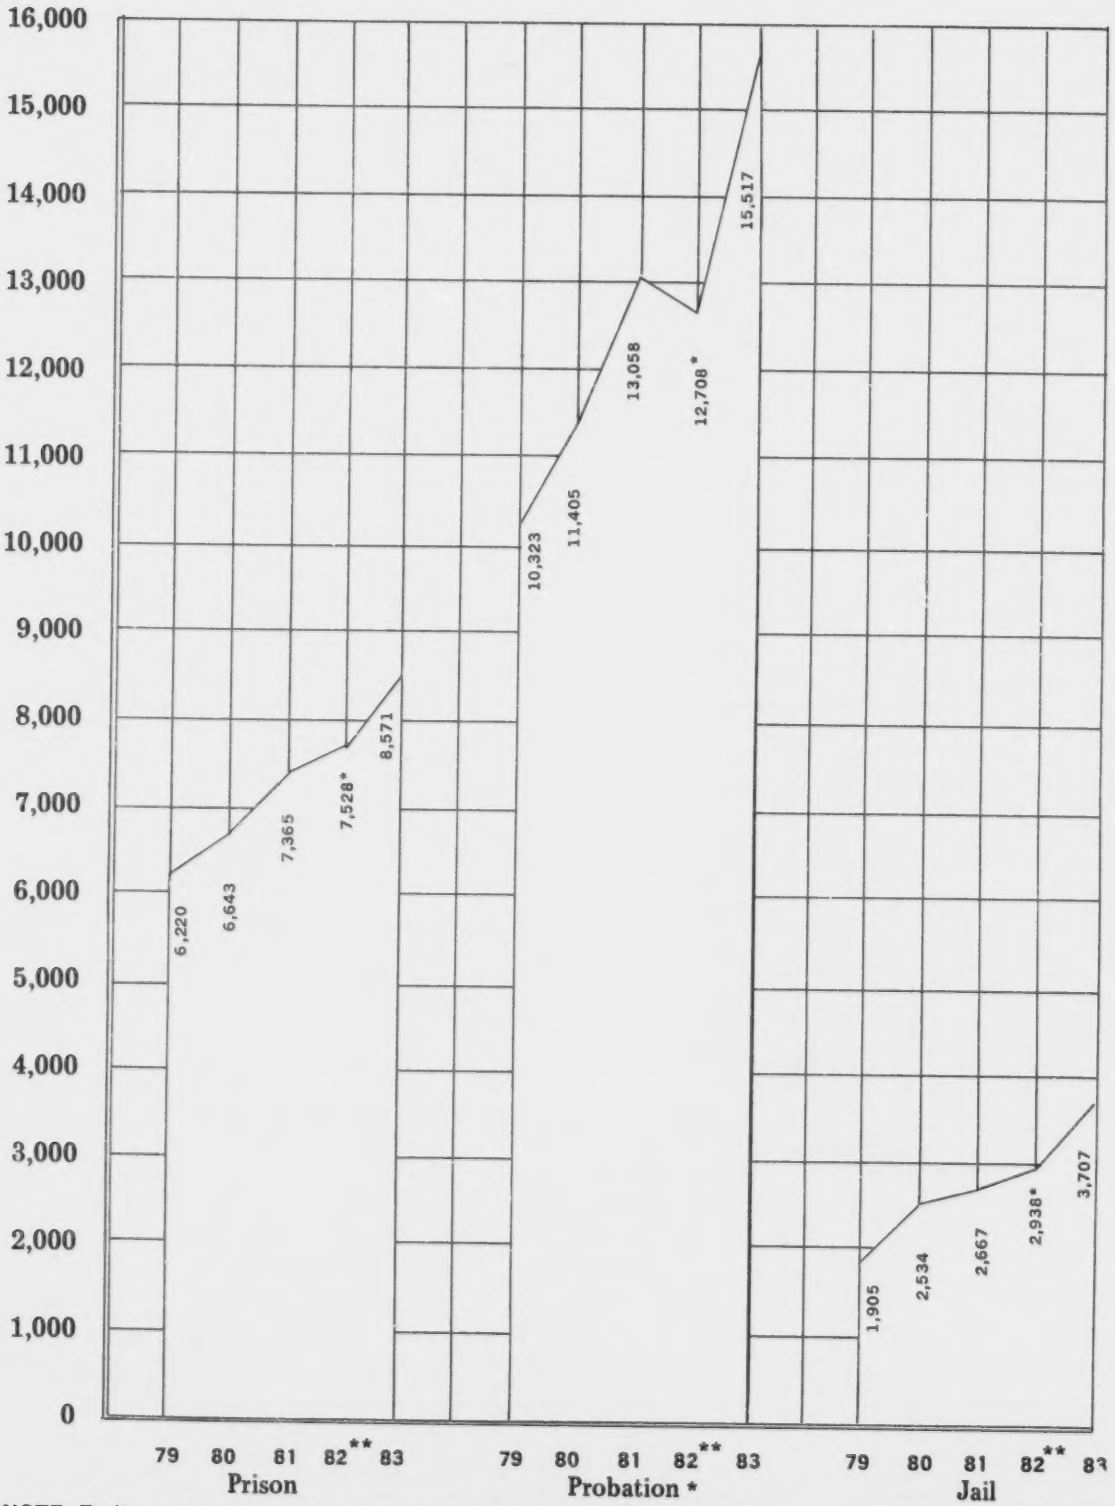
A3 Court Disposition: 5 Year Comparison



NOTE: Each conviction is counted; some persons will have multiple convictions

* Includes HYTA Convictions

PRISON COMMITMENTS

The B tables represent people to the fullest extent possible. They count the number of prison commitments for the year, reporting the longest sentence from each commitment. A person may be committed more than once in a year, however, with multiple sentences per commitment. In such cases that person would be counted each time s/he was committed. In 1983 there were commitments totaling 5,747 for non-attempts and 1,157 for attempts. In addition to listing the number of commitments by crime type, the charts give the minimum sentences for each crime. Those minimum sentences falling between the various categories are grouped with the higher group. The B-2 table contains men and women commitments but B-3 lists only female commitments. These charts also contain an average minimum sentence for various crimes.

The first two charts compare prisoner commitments with the state's population and the number of reported crimes.

Other charts cover commitments by age, race, sex, and crime types. The last chart illustrates the percent change in crimes against people as percent of total commitments.

PRISONS AND PRISONERS

The following tables and charts present information on the state's prisons and prisoners. A map shows the location of all prisons and camps. Another section describes each institution.

The C tables count the controlling sentences for persons who were on count at an institution or in the halfway house program the last day of 1983. Temporary releases, furloughs, out-to-court and admissions to the Department of Mental Health are not counted nor are persons who are on a facility count but who did not have any active sentence record on the Department's computer information system.

The C-1 chart contains sentences for both men and women but C-2 contains only women. Besides listing the number of persons serving sentences for the various crimes, the charts contain minimum sentences and averages. Sentences falling between the various categories are grouped into the higher categories. Attempted offenses are given directly below the named offense and are not included in the non-attempt category.

One chart lists the various treatment activities available in Michigan prisons and minimum security camps. Another lists critical incidents.

Charts illustrating activities of the Office of Health Care are not included in the report because a separate statistical document is available from that office.

Charts also are available in this section show the activities of the Michigan State Industries. A chart showing the disposition of major misconducts also can be found in this section.

PAROLE

The D charts show parole activity in 1983. Table D-1 counts the last continuance or parole action taken on a person during the year, but a person may have had several actions during the year.

The D2a and D2b charts show the results of four-year follow ups of persons paroled in 1979. The offense groups shown on the left in D2b are those crimes from which the prisoner was paroled. As of this year's annual report there is no data to indicate the type of crime for which the parolee was reconvicted, but that information is expected to be included in the 1984 annual report.

FIELD SERVICES

This section describes, through use of statistics, the activities of the Bureau of Field Services.

This bureau supervises all felons on probation, parole or living in the community in a halfway house or resident home.

The supervision is divided into three regions which are shown on the map in this section.

The central office prepares budgets, sets policies and handles matters that cannot be taken care of locally such as the Interstate Compact and communications concerning absconders picked up in other states.

Parole violations which result in return to prison are shown in this section.

Personnel and funds distribution illustrate the total staffing in field supervision, community corrections centers and central office administration. It also describes, through a pie chart, the dollars spent during the 1982-83 fiscal year on these same bureau sections. The work unit distribution charts show how the work time of the employees of this bureau is divided into supervision and investigation.

Supervision is further divided into type and shows that probation supervision accounts for 68 percent of all supervision activities.

Investigations account for 27 percent of the work units. Of all investigations those done for the pre-sentence reports clearly predominate.

The bureau measures workloads by assigning unit values to the various tasks. A completed pre-sentence investigation equals five units and each client supervised ranges from 2 units to .1 unit. In most Michigan counties parole and probation agents average 110 work units per month.

COMMUNITY PROGRAMS

One chart (F-1) reflects Community Programs population, earnings and cost statistics during the last six years. Significant changes occurred during the last two years, between 1981 and 1982-83 FY. Most notable of these were changes in the average daily count; parole, escape and new felony charge terminations; and in prisoner earings.

Community Programs Terminations FY 1982-83 (F-2) shows that paroles are higher than anytime during the last six years, while new felony charges are the lowest, and escapes continue a three-year decline.

Community Programs Terminations - Percent of Total 1974 - FY 1982-83 (F-6) displays the general trends in termination statistics over the past ten years. In general, unsuccessful terminations have declined from a combined 43.4% in 1978 to 29.3% in FY 1982-83. At the same time, successful terminations have increased from 55.8% to 62.4% during the same period.

Community Programs Population changes 1974 - FY 1982-83 (F-3) reflects the dramatic increase and peak in the average daily count through 1981 and subsequent two year rapid decline.

Community Programs Prisoner Earnings FY 1982-83 (F-4) shows the general distribution and total amount of prisoner earnings during the current fiscal year. The $3.3 million gross earnings represents a drop of 43.8%.

Community Programs Prisoner Earnings 1978 - FY 1982-83 (F-5) shows the dramatic 50.1% drop in average daily prisoner earnings since the 1979 peak. A similarly dramatic drop of 43.8% occurred during the same period in total gross earnings.
